MEDICAL.

Do Not Suffer Any Longer.

Knowing that a cough can be checked in a day, and the first stages of consumption broken in a week, we hereby guarantee Dr. Acker's English Cough Remedy, and will refund the money to all who buy, take it as per directions, and do not find our statement correct. T. G. JULIAN.

James—Hallo, seen the governor yet? How did he cut up about that bill? William—He footed the bill. "That's good. You are rid of it then." "No. I was the Bill he footed."—[St. Joseph News.

Can't Sleep Nights

Is the complaint of thousands suffering from Asthma, Consumption, Coughs, etc. Did you ever try Dr. Acker's English Remedy? It is the preparation known for all Lung Troubles. Sold on a positive guarantee at 25c and 50c. T. G. Julian, druggist.

In both Louisiana and Texas the screw worm has been prevalent, causing much injury to stock. In all animals the eggs, after being laid by the fly, hatch into worms, and if in wounds they at once become buried out of sight. To kill the maggots crude carbolic acid is recommended, of sufficient strength to destroy them, with a mixture of tar and grease smeared around the margin of the wounds to prevent the attacks of the fly.

The First step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat, can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction, and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning, you are taking the first step into nervous prostration. You need a nerve tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its normal, healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great nerve tonic and alterative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the liver and kidneys resume healthy action. Try a bottle. Price 50c. at W. S. Lloyd's drug store.

Eupespy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it to enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you good digestion and oust the demon dyspepsia and install instead eupespy. We recommend Electric Bitters for dyspepsia and all diseases of liver, stomach and kidneys. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle by W. S. Lloyd, druggist.

We must not descend to earth to regulate the necessities of this life, but in all things our heart should relish only the dew of God's pleasure, and refer all to the praise of God.—[St. Francis de Sales.

Pronounced Hopeless.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which, settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally settled in consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying, 'I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman.' Trial bottles free at W. S. Lloyd's drug store, regular size, 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

Dr. Armand Jeannoutot, a young physician of Paris, is the latest in the field as a consumption cure discoverer. His cure is by inhalation. His apparatus consists of a small, tubular brass boiler connected with a brass pan with a lid. When in operation from under the lid vapors escape which spread about the room, one of the parts of which is prussic acid.

Is Life Worth Living?

Not if you go through the world a dyspeptic. Dr. Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets are a positive cure for the worst forms of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Flatulency and Constipation. Guaranteed and sold by T. G. Julian, druggist.

Those who recognize, by the light of faith, the sovereignty of God in all things will recognize the sovereignty of God in the daily and hourly details of their own personal life and in the changes of their lot.

A Duty to Yourself.

It is surprising that people will use a common ordinary pill when they can secure a valuable English one for the same money. Dr. Acker's English Pills are a positive cure for sick headache and all liver troubles. They are small, sweet, easily taken and do not gripe. T. G. Julian, druggist.

The martyrs were not differently constituted from us; their bodies were kneaded from the same slime, they were sustained by the same God, they expected the same glory, but they knew how to will.—[Ven. Louis of Grenada.

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it, is that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never tried it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any throat, lung or chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottles free at W. S. Lloyd's drug store.

Miss Hytome (at an evening social)—Mr. Western, I imagine from your military figure that you are a West Pointer.

Mr. Western (a printer)—No, ma'am; I am of a different type—a setter.—West Shore.

A Child Killed.

Another child killed by the use of opiates given in the form of Soothing Syrup. Why mothers give their children such deadly poisons is surprising when they can relieve the child of its peculiar troubles by using Dr. Acker's Baby Soother. It contains no opium or morphine. Sold by T. G. Julian, druggist.

Harry—Is Miss Maude a particular friend of yours? Reginald—Well, I should say she was from the way she gave me the mitten last night. She's too particular altogether.—[Detroit Free Press.

Bird Language.

That birds have a language of their own is just as certain as that human beings have the same. Of course our talk to the birdies is just as unintelligible as theirs is to us. But they do talk, not only to one another, but to us, entreating, demanding and exhorting, no one doubts that has spent any time studying bird lore.

No one wonders at the skill of parrots and mocking-birds, for they are but imitators; but who has not felt his heart thrill with pleasure in the early spring days to hear a bird cry out in plain English, "Kill-deer! kill-deer!" or still later at "Bob White," repeated as many times? and who has not felt a thrill of humor as the saucy cat-bird peers down from some height above us and draws out, "I can't! I can't."

And the meadow-lark, who has not felt a thrill of wondering surprise as he has been sensible of a quick flash of wings, and then heard the sweet notes of, "You, can't see me! you can't see me!" ring out again and again? Who has not started off in quick pursuit, but the meadow reveals nothing, for skulking low down in the grass sits Mr. Meadow-lark. Indeed, you may play a game of hide-and-seek with him, but he ever eludes a gaze, now darting up if you come too near, and then sink down as quickly, ever out of sight. How can we help feeling that the bird means just what he says, and enjoys his game of hide-and-seek greatly?

And who has not felt a thrill of awe creeping over him as he has been awakened in the still, small hours of night by hearing some one call out, "Whip-poor-Will! Whip-poor-Will!" and then to find that it was only a bird?

How pleasant it is to have the birds talking in our own language, if but a word, it makes them doubly dear to us, and we feel better acquainted with them. But how much more one can understand who mingles freely in bird-life. Are they not a higher order of animal life than we have any idea of? I remember when a child of regarding them as half-way between man and angel.

If birds cannot talk and confide to one another, how do they soon learn to distinguish between friends and enemies? How does a bird know she may perch on a cow's back and feast on the flies there? How does she know that she may pick up tiny grains under the horse's feet, and yet fly in the greatest terror from only the housecat?

Oh, that we might understand all the sweet smirks and the pretty words they have one with another, how much more entertaining life would be. But God understands them all. He hears all their cries, and pities and loves them for has he not said, "Not even a sparrow falls without the Father's notice?" and if He notices and loves the birds so far below Him, how much more should we, who are but creatures of the same Divine Hand.—[Portland Transcript.

Burglar Proof Lock.

A new sort of lock, to be applied to ordinary doors, and capable of resisting the attack of Burglars, has recently been exhibited in Paris. As every one knows, complication of locks on the doors of ordinary houses and rooms is of very little avail against the professional burglar, who, wasting no time in trying to raise the tumblers and move the bolt, simply inserts the end of his short iron lever, or "jimmy," between the door and its rebate, and forces the whole affair inward, tearing out the locks and bolts on the way. No multiplication of tumblers can prevent this; and the only real protection against such violence, as applied to a wooden door and frame, is either a heavy piece of furniture moved up against the door, or a strong horse, which answers the same purpose, and will hold the door in place, lock or no lock, until it is battered in pieces. This new device, as described in the American Architect, comprises the combination of the iron shore with the ordinary lock in such a manner that locking a door sets a shore in place, which will resist an enormous strain. On the return of the proprietor, the unlocking of the door in the ordinary way shifts the upper end of the shore from the door to the frame, where it presents no obstacle to the opening of the door. The mechanism of the lock itself need not be very elaborate, although the picking of the lock would move both the bolt and the shore, for, if there are tumblers enough to prevent picking with a bit of wire, few burglars are likely to have the time or tools for more elaborate operations, and if the "jimmy" will not force an entrance, they will probably give up the undertaking. As the iron bar is not fastened into the socket at either end, it may be lifted out in a moment, if not wanted, and put out of the way.

Felling Big Trees in the North-West

It may well be imagined that it is no boy's play to cut down a tree from five to ten feet in diameter. The axemen work in pairs, and after selecting the place where they desire the tree to fall, they begin operations. Trees generally have a swell at the base that is cross-grained and gnarled, hard to cut, and not good timber, and as it is not desirable to have this in the log it becomes necessary to cut the tree above this defect. Some trees, especially the fir, have a great deal of pitch at the base, and this, also, renders it desirable to begin cutting some distance from the ground. Another advantage of getting above the ground is being out of the way of brush and fallen timber.

In order to do this the axemen chop a notch in the tree nearly as high as their head, the notch being about six inches deep and about the same in length, and inserts in it the end of a board, known as a chopping board, upon which he stands to wield his axe. The board is a piece of oak or fir from four to five feet long, and about ten inches wide, the inserting end being narrower and bound with steel, upon which is a calk like that on a horseshoe, which holds the board firmly when the man's weight is upon it. If the first notch is not high enough he cuts another higher up, and still another, if necessary, using the boards as steps until he is often ten or twelve feet above the ground before he finds a place suitable for chopping. The two axemen, having thus gained a position on opposite sides of the tree, begin the work of chopping with their double-bladed axes, working carefully so as to direct the fall of the tree in the line selected. Of late years the improved style of two-hand saws has been made to do the chief work. After cutting with the axe a deep line in the tree on the side to which it is to be made fall, the men begin sawing on the opposite side of the tree, wedging the cut made by the saw as they progress, thus keeping the saw clear and gradually inclining the tree in the right direction. In this way a tree may be made to fall in the direction directly opposite to its natural inclination. When the tree shows symptoms of falling the men give a few well-directed strokes with the axe to guide it in its course, and then spring lightly to the ground, standing near the base of the tree, which experience has proved to be the safest position. Gradually the forest giant bows its head, its fibres cracking like pistol shots, until, at last it comes down with a rush, its limbs dragging down others with it, and the under ones being splintered into pieces.

Learning to Walk.

People sometimes ask, at what age can we seat a child in a chair; when put him on his legs; how old must he be before we teach him to walk? The answers are easy. He must not be made to sit till he has spontaneously sat up in his bed and has been able to hold his seat. This sometimes happens in the sixth or seventh month, sometimes later. The sitting position is not without danger, even when he takes it himself; imposed prematurely upon him, it tires the bone and may interfere with the growth, so the child should never be taught to stand or to walk. That is his affair not ours. Place him on a carpet in a healthy room in the open air, and let him play in freedom, roll, try to go ahead on his hands and feet, or go backward, which he will do more successfully at first; it all gradually strengthens and hardens him. Some day he will manage to get upon his knees, another day to go forward upon them, and then to raise himself up against the chairs. He thus learns to do all he can, as fast as he can, and no more. But, they say, he will be longer in learning to walk if he is left to go on his hands or knees indefinitely. What difference does it make if, exploring the world in this way, he becomes acquainted with things, learns to estimate distances, strengthens his legs and back, prepares himself, in short, to walk better when he gets to walking? The important thing is not whether he walks now or then; but that he learns to guide himself, to help himself, and to have confidence in himself. I hold, without exaggeration, that education of the character is going on at the same time with training in locomotion, and that the way one learns to walk is not without moral importance. —[Popular Science Monthly.

The Charleston News and Courier

notes that Kentucky has lost its proud position as the best horse State in the Union, Missouri furnishing the best equines for either peace or war. Just so, Missouri is all right. She is justly proud of the high station she has gained as an agricultural and stock-raising State—"fine blooded" especially.
